

THE MILITARY HISTORY OF KUHMO – A MAP

In Kuhmo, the battles of the Winter War lasted throughout the war, and the events were like the whole Winter War in miniature: tough defences, guerrilla attacks, violent counter-attacks and devastating encirclements. A special event of its own was the fight against the Red Army's ski troops. In Kuhmo, the Finnish forces defeated the 54th Mountain Division and destroyed Dolin's Ski Brigade.

During the Interim Peace, Salpalinja was built on the eastern border of Finland, and attached field fortifications were also built in Kuhmo. Remnants of structures can be seen near the fortifications built during the Winter War, as well as in other areas.

When the Continuation War began, the Finnish troops crossed the border and attacked towards Lake Rukajärvi.

The actual fighting took place on the Soviet side, but five partisan attacks took place in Kuhmo.

Kuhmo has military historical sites across the municipality, and only some of them have been included in this brochure.

The artifacts, photographs, miniature models and sound effects of the Kuhmo Winter War Museum help in illustrating the events of the Winter War. In the exhibition, you will get to know the everyday life of civilians being evacuated, as well as learn about the daily lives of the Finnish and Soviet soldiers. The showrooms focus on different themes, such as the evacuations, parish villages, front-line care, care of the wounded, battles and life after peace.

The Untold Arctic Wars digital exhibition presents events of the Second World War in the Arctic region near the Winter War Museum. The exhibition consists of topics collected on touch screens, which visitors can browse as they wish. A short film focusing on the first moments of the Second World War in the Arctic is also available.

The original scars of war are still visible in many places on the Kuhmo Winter War tour. The restored Winter War fortifications can be found at Jyrkänkylä and Saunajärvi. The renovated encirclement of the Red Army at Paloaho is also open to public.

The Jyrkänkylä Winter War Base outdoor museum has restored armour, trenches and other defence station structures, such as a machine gun post. In addition, there is plenty of equipment on display, such as the Soviet T-26, a tank, the 37 mm Bofors anti-tank gun used by the Finns, several field guns and mortars.

THE MILITARY HISTORY OF SUOMUSSALMI – A MAP

Visit Suomussalmi
www.visitsuomussalmi.fi

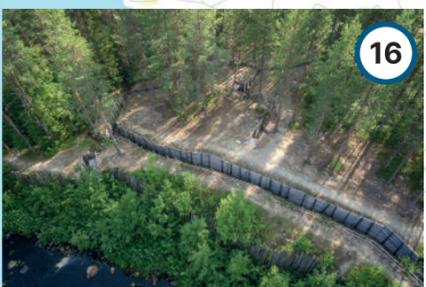

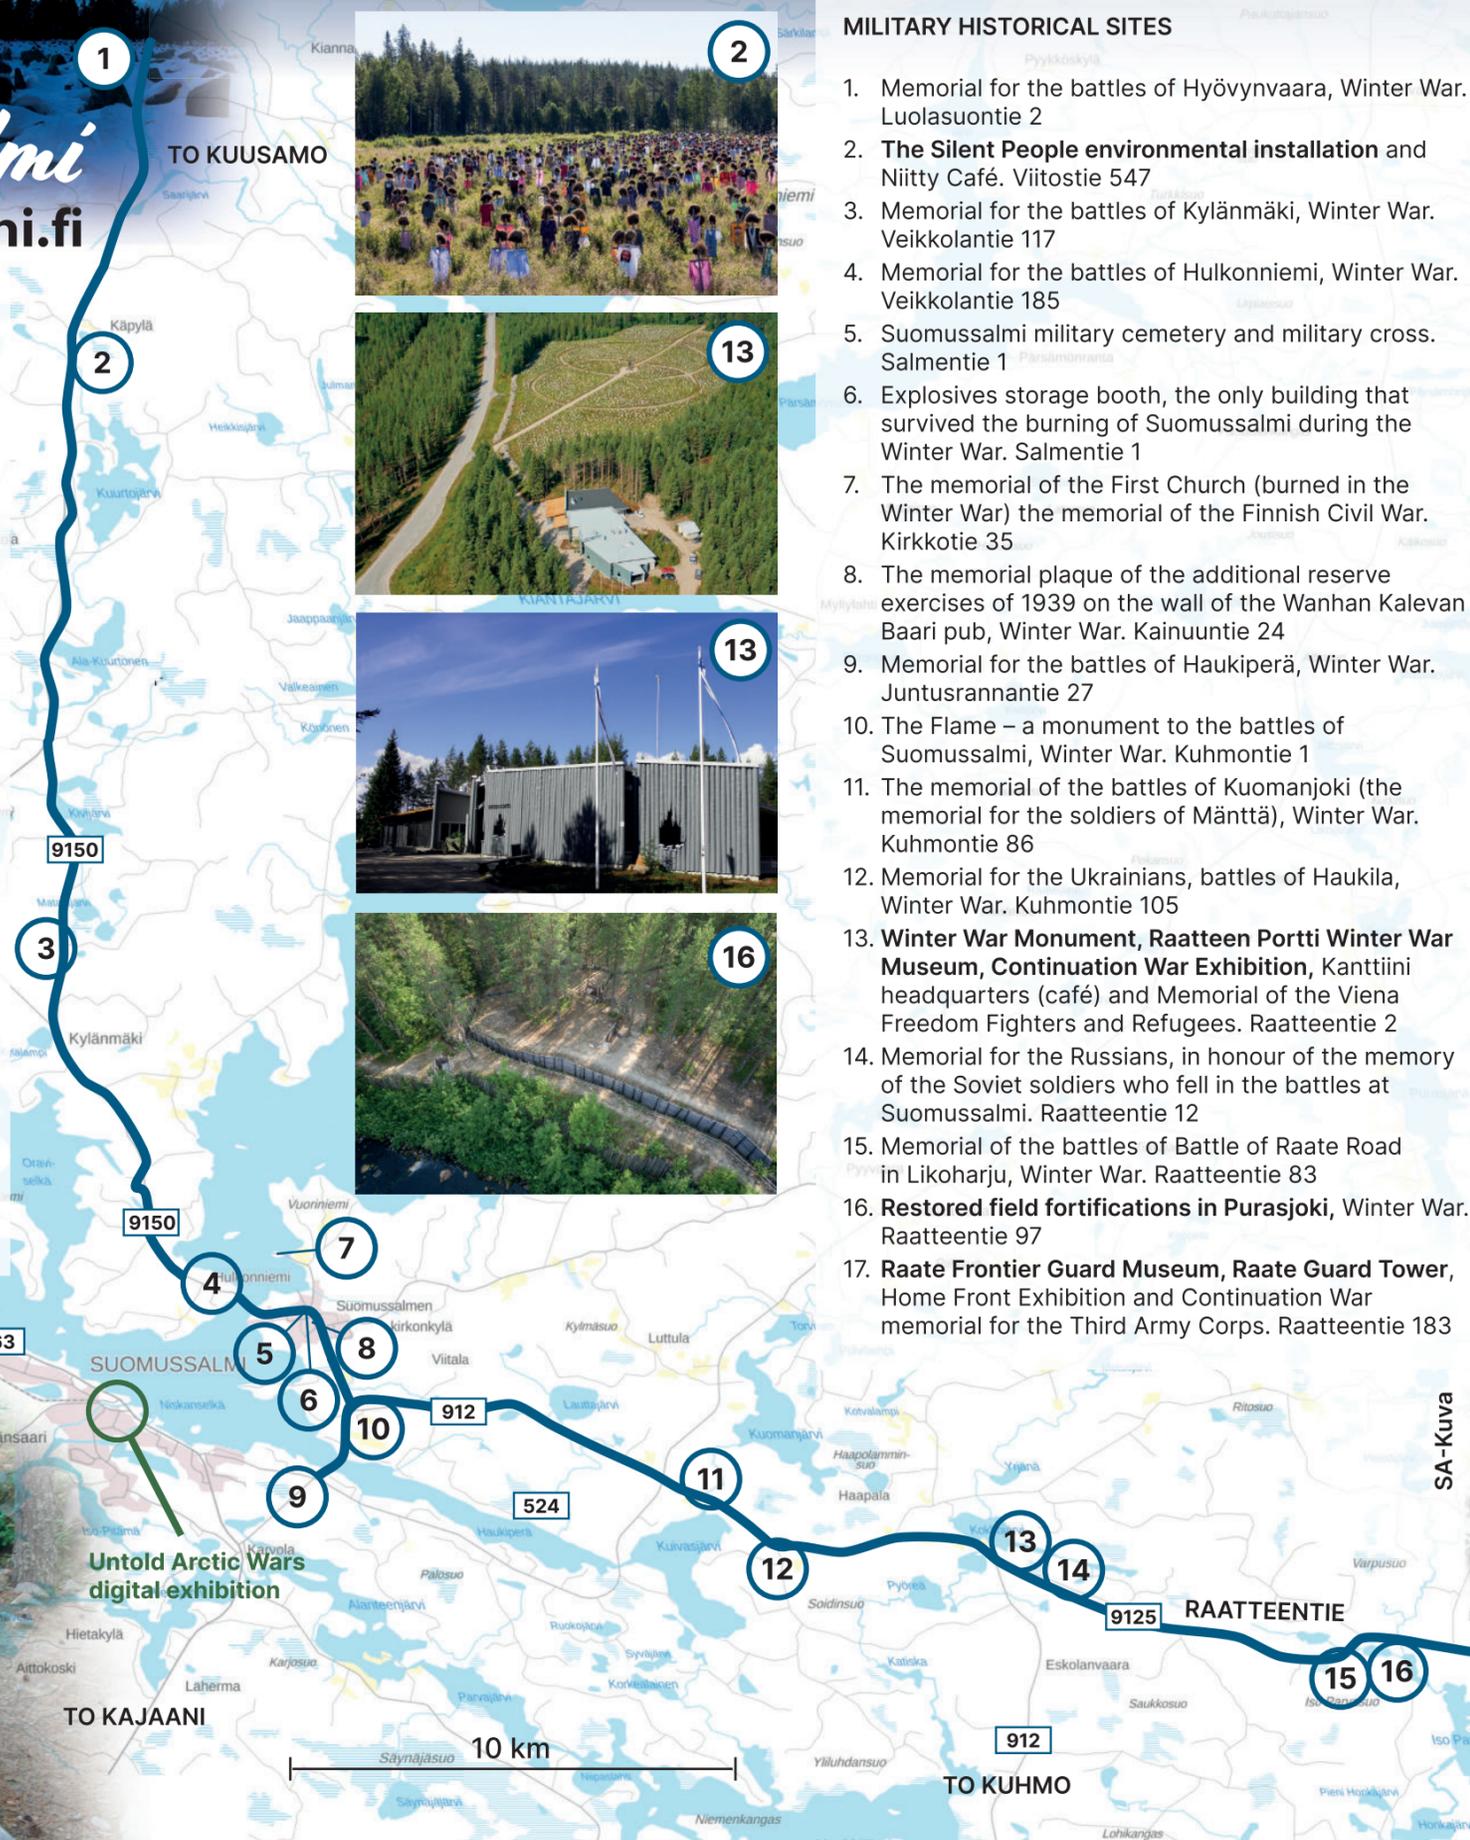

The battles against the Soviet Union in Suomussalmi during the Winter War were nationally significant and are still internationally famous. At Suomussalmi, the Finnish forces defeated the 163rd Division and destroyed the 44th Division.

During the Interim Peace, Salpalinja was built on the eastern border of Finland, and attached field fortifications were also built in Suomussalmi. Remnants of structures can be seen near the fortifications built during the Winter War, as well as in other areas.

When the Continuation War began, the Finnish troops crossed the border and attacked towards Uhtua in co-operation with the Germans. The actual fighting took place on the Soviet side of the border, but six partisan attacks took place in Suomussalmi during the war.

Suomussalmi has military historical sites across the municipality, and only some of them have been included in this brochure. The best-known site is Raate Road. Extensive fighting also took place at Hulkonniemi and Hyövyuvaara, as well as elsewhere.

The original scars of war are still visible in many places. Along the museum road in Raate, there are, for example, a Russian monument, the restored Purasjoki fighting position, the memorial for battles of Raate in Likoharju, and right at the east end of the road you can find the Frontier Guard Museum.

Raateen Portti, Winter War Museum, Continuation War Exhibition and Winter War Monument

Raateen Portti and its surroundings form a 100-hectare museum area. In addition to the Winter War Museum, there are many war monuments, restored nature trails and campfire sites in the area. The Winter War battlefields include restored accommodation areas of the Finnish and Soviet troops. You can find information boards along the trails, describing the events in the area. The cannons, tanks and other wartime material outside are from the Winter War era.

The museum area is an extensive exhibition of the historic battle of Raate Road. It tells heartwrenching stories of the events of the Winter War in 1939–1940 and of what happened at Raate. The museum also has an exhibition on the Continuation War, with Finnish, Russian and German wartime materials and stories included. During the Continuation War, the shocking partisan attacks on the eastern border and the German railroad, which was also called the "Railroad of Death", are part of the military history of the Suomussalmi region.

The Raate Frontier Guard Museum, Guard Tower and Home Front Exhibition

Located at the end of the Raate Road, the Frontier Guard Museum has been restored to its 1939 look. The museum tells of the life of the frontier guard station before the Second World War, and also about how the events of the Raate Road during the Winter War affected the everyday life at the station.

At the Raate Guard Tower you can view the area from high above. The Home Front Exhibition is located at the same yard as the Guard Tower. The Home Front Exhibition displays objects from the past. At the exhibition, you can see what life was like at home during the war. Please check the opening hours of the sites before visiting.
